COVER LETTER

20 January 2025

Dear Søren Langelund

I am excited to apply for the Student Assistant position in your Global Fire & Rescue Marketing team in Esbjerg. As a multimedia design student at EASV, with over 15 years of experience in linguistics and interpretation, I bring a unique combination of creativity, adaptability, and organizational skills that align closely with the needs of this role.

Since relocating to Denmark in 2022, I have faced a challenge of starting my career from scratch. I had to combine my own language studies with teaching and interpreting. Working as an interpreter for the Danish Armed Forces has improved my ability to manage tasks effectively and communicate across diverse cultural and professional contexts. These skills, combined with my growing expertise in multimedia design make me a perfect candidate for the position I am applying for.

At EASV, I have been gaining experience in web development, branding, and digital communication, that makes me believe that I will be able to contribute meaningfully to Viking's marketing efforts. My prior experience developing tailored workshops and digital content for an IT company Avenga in Ukraine also gives me a strong foundation for handling practical and creative tasks. I know well that practical experience is the most valuable thing in any branch so I am particularly inspired by Viking's global reach and the opportunity to be part of a team that values collaboration and innovation.

I am eager to assist in developing marketing materials, managing online and offline content, and supporting your exhibitions and sales initiatives. I am confident that my strong work ethic, multicultural background, and passion for creative problem-solving will make me a valuable addition to your team.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how my skills and experiences align with the goals of Viking Life-Saving Equipment. Thank you for considering my application, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely
Halyna Kuzminchuk
